Part 1 of 2

The shortlist

Each player is under 23. Each costs between EUR 400k and EUR 2.5M. Each matches the attitude profile of the club's successful sales. Each has a real chance that value grows.

#	Player	Club	Pos	Age	Value today	Likely in 3 yrs	Chance of +50%
1	Lisandro Piñero	Banfield	FW	19	€400k	€10.48M	99%
2	Noah Tolf	IFK Göteborg	MF	21	€1.00M	€20.66M	99%
3	Yannick Geiger	AIK	MF	19	€600k	€14.09M	99%
4	Jeremías Merlo	Gimnasia	MF	20	€700k	€13.87M	99%
5	Niko Sepic	Istra 1961	MF	20	€400k	€8.91M	99%
6	George Earthy	West Ham	MF	22	€1.00M	€23.17M	99%
7	Alfie Dorrington	Aberdeen	MF	21	€500k	€13.15M	99%
8	Romeo Arrhenius Leandersson	Mjällby	MF	18	€600k	€14.04M	99%
9	Alessandro Romano	Roma	MF	20	€500k	€12.45M	99%
10	Andrea Natali	AZ Alkmaar	DF	18	€400k	€10.71M	99%

Values come from simulations, not promises. "Chance of +50%" is the share of 1,000 simulated futures where the player is worth at least 50% more than today.

Part 2 of 2

The shortlist, ranks 11 to 20

The same rules apply to every player on this page. Each one is under 23. Each one fits the club profile. Each one fills a squad need or has a strong value case.

#	Player	Club	Pos	Age	Value today	Likely in 3 yrs	Chance of +50%

19	Adrian Kurd Rønning	Kristiansund	FW	20	€450k	€6.76M	99%
20	Seydou Fini	Genoa	FW	20	€1.00M	€19.16M	99%

The ranking combines four factors: attitude fit, chance of a value jump, expected value growth, and squad need. Details are on the next pages.

How we picked them

Three questions. Three answers.

We started with 1,255 young players from the global market. Then we asked three questions. A player must pass all three to make this list.

1. Does his attitude fit the club?

CF Montréal buys young players. It develops them. It sells them for more. We studied the 18 players who left the club for a fee. We looked at what the successful ones had in common. Determination. Composure. Work rate. Teamwork. That profile is the yardstick. Every player on this list matches it closely.

2. Can his value grow?

For each player we ran 1,000 simulated futures over three years. Each future is a different "what if". Injury, form, and moves differ in each one. The result is a range of values: the likely value, the worst realistic value, and the odds of a big jump.

3. Is there a place for him?

The squad has no left winger. It has two left-backs, both over 26. We scored each position by need. A player who fills a real hole gets bonus points. No position gets more than three names.

Reading the player pages

What the numbers mean

Each player gets one page. This page explains how to read it.

The two charts

Both charts show where value can go over three years. The grey band is the likely range. The dark line is the middle path. The left chart is the optimistic forecast. The right chart is the cautious forecast. If both end above today's value, the player is a low-risk bet.

The four numbers

Attitude score — how well he matches the club's success profile. Range is 0 (no match) to 1 (perfect match). Chance of +50% — the share of simulations where value rises 50% or more. Worst realistic value — the bad end of the range. Performance rating — his average match rating this season, out of 10.

The one-paragraph summary

Every page ends with a plain-language summary. That paragraph is the short version. The rest of the page is the evidence.

Being honest

What could be wrong

This report is a starting point, not a guarantee. These are the limits we know.

- Personality data is incomplete. Hidden traits like pressure handling and professionalism exist for about one third of players. Where they are missing, we used a general profile of what works at clubs like CF Montréal.
- The club benchmark is small. Five players set the success profile. It is the best evidence a club this size has. Do not over-read small differences.
- Simulations are estimates, not promises. They show what can happen, not what will happen. The optimistic chart assumes good form continues.
- Data ages. Values are from June 2026. Attributes are from November 2025. Ratings are from August 2026. A move or an injury changes the picture.
- One advanced-stats site was unavailable. FBref blocks automated access. Those stats are absent. Everything else is real data, not filled-in guesses.
